About the Parenting NI Support Line

Every parent experiences difficulties from time to time. Sometimes these may seem small but can cause a lot of worry, and sometimes they can be major family crises. In many cases it helps to seek support from someone outside the family.

Parenting NI is here for parents and other family members when things seem too much. As a Support Line Volunteer you will listen to how clients feel and won’t judge. You won’t tell the client what to do but will talk through their options to help them improve the situation.

The freephone Support Line is available to clients and delivered by a team of volunteers who are based in Parenting NI’s Belfast city centre premises.

A comprehensive induction will be provided to support and develop Volunteers and will begin with a training course to prepare potential volunteers for the role. Thereafter, Volunteers will complete a 6-month settling-in period and are provided with ongoing support and development. Volunteer travel expenses are paid, within a budget.

The Parenting NI Support Line is currently open Monday to Thursday, 9.30am to 3.30pm and Friday, 9.30am to 12.30pm. The service operates all year round except for public and bank holidays, and it is desirable that Volunteers have the ability to commit to the organisation for a minimum of 1 year.

Becoming a Support Line Volunteer

The role of Support Line Volunteer requires a special combination of skills, qualities and experience. Naturally, it requires a careful recruitment process to find the most suitable people for the role:

1. Application – The information provided on the application form and through the Access NI Disclosure Certificate is used to ensure you meet our basic eligibility criteria.

2. Initial Selection Meeting – You will be invited to a short meeting in Parenting NI's Belfast city centre premises. This allows you to find out more about what is involved in the training and the voluntary work and it allows us to ask you about your previous experience and interest in our work. Based on this information, you may be offered a place on our training.

3. The Training Course – You will be asked to attend the Parenting NI mandatory training course to prepare you for the role. Those who complete the course successfully will be invited to attend a final selection meeting.

4. Final Selection Meeting – You will meet again with Parenting NI staff to discuss your progress over the duration of the training and your suitability to begin volunteering. Not everyone who completes the training programme will automatically be offered a Volunteer placement.

5. Induction – All new Volunteers complete a 6-month settling-in period. During this period you will be helped to further develop skills and/or knowledge identified during the selection process. During your induction period you will be able to review your role at one-to-one meetings.

6. Benefits

   Becoming a Support Line Volunteer offers opportunities to

- develop knowledge and skills to enhance your personal, family and professional life
- access ongoing learning and development
- undertake varied and challenging work with a wide range of clients in a well-structured and supported work environment
- enjoy social activities and develop friendships
- use your experience to help parents and safeguard children.
